Winners In Contest To Tour Washington

Mary Louise Parris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Parris of Route 1, Appomattox, and Warren Coleman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kyle Coleman of Route 2, Appomattox, have been notified of their selection as winners in a contest sponsored by Southside Electric Cooperative of Crewe.

These two Juniors from Appomattox County High School participated in a quiz with contestants from 18 high schools in the Southside Area. Only 12 students were chosen as winners of the all expense paid "Rural Electric Washington Yuth Tour" on June 10-13, 1974.

The purpose of this tour is to bring together young people of electric cooperatives from across the nation for an educational experience of our government in action. The Virginia group spends a whole day on Capitol Hill; each student will visit and talk with his own Congressman in his office. The entire group from Virginia will visit both State Senators in their chambers and also sit in on various committee meetings. Another exciting morning is spent at the White House with the other youths from across the nation. In the past, this has been one thousand people. Of course, sight-seeing of Washington, usually a visit to a foreign embassy is scheduled, as well as a tour of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association building where they will learn more about the importance of the rural electric cooperative.

In addition, the co-op would be of service to the community. Increased tourism in the downtown area will provide more downtown area and shopping center business; tourists will be encouraged to stay in Appomattox overnight after their visit to the park. Churches and civic groups and clubs, such as 4-H Extension Homemakers, FFA, and 4-H, will have an outlet for sale of locally produced goods.

A community arts and crafts center has the potential for being a center of community pride, and the co-op concept is in keeping with the proposed "Downtown Mall." Special festivals can be held in addition to a regularly operated arts and crafts shop. In the long run, more citizens can become involved in arts and crafts through special demonstration and classes because many co-op members will do their work at the center. With success, the co-op can expand toward incorporation of a railroad - Civil War museum and other special attractions.

Strong interest in formation of an "Appomattox Arts and Crafts Co-op" was demonstrated by twenty citizens at a meeting on May 1. The meeting was called by a local craftsman, Mrs. Virginia Hancock, who requested D. W. Mac Pherson, VPI & SU Extension Agent, to hold an educational meeting and lead the discussion. The group agreed to try to lease a downtown location for the summer months initially. A committee made up of Mrs. Hancock, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bartelt, and Mr. and Mrs. Mac Pherson was appointed to write a proposal for Articles of Incorporation, By-Laws, and financial arrangements to include a summer lease.

Artists and craftsmen not yet in contact with Mrs. Hancock can call her at 352-6283 for placement on the register for membership when the co-op is organized and for receipt of future notices. A second organizational meeting is expected by the end of May.

Big Agenda For CVPDC April Meeting

A special report concerning State Health Department changes to Subdivision Evaluation Procedures received a great deal of response at the April meeting of the Central Virginia Planning District Commission.

The report was presented for informative purposes but after extensive discussion the Commissioners voted unanimously to adopt a resolution expressing dissatisfaction with the new written guidelines.

The new guidelines require more extensive information and plans for subdivision lots not connecting to central sewage treatment facilities.

Commissioner Gary Jennings representing Amherst County pointed out that while the intent of the guidelines was good--that of protecting the consumer from purchasing land unsuitable for septic tank and subsurface drainfields--the result could be greatly increased expenses for the developer, thus driving the price of housing even higher.

"Present guidelines protect the consumer," states Jennings. 'It bothers me that the State has the power to set down new guidelines, which if strictly enforced, could drive new housing prices skyhigh," he continued.

Gray Perrow, Sanitarian Superintendent for the Central Virginia Health District, was present at the meeting to answer questions and indicated that he felt the guidelines would not be rigidly enforced but would be used only where questions arose about the suitability of the land.

Other commissioners expressed the same thoughts as Jennings, pointing out their concern for the possibility of increasing housing prices and the fact that the State could set such guidelines without local approval.

In other action the Commission authorized Chairman Warren Otey to execute a contract with the Appomattox County Board of Supervisors to prepare a County zoning ordinance as part of the local assistance program.

The Comprehensive Law Enforcement Component Plan for Central Virginia was also adopted at the monthly meeting of the Commission. Such a plan must be adopted in order that localities will be eligible for grant funds for law enforcement equipment from the Division of Justice and Crime Prevention

Other action taken at the April meeting of the CVPDC included the postponement of the public hearing on the Regional Housing Policies Plan and Program from June 13 to August 29. The date was changed to allow sufficient time for meeting State requirements for a public hearing.

Authorization was also given to the Commission to sign a contract with Battelle Institute for $4,916 to provide regional economic projections for the Commission's proposed Economic Policies Plan and Program.

Data will be supplied by the CVPDC and the Battelle Institute will provide projections and indicate trends for the region. This information will be used in future planning and will also be available for localities to use when they need such information.

Commissioner E. W. Carson, Appomattox County, pointed out that new industries often want economic information about an area and in the past the information has been difficult to obtain.

"The information supplied by the Battelle Institute will be of enormous value to the localities," said Carson.

Another result of the Commission meeting was the authorization to submit a grant application to the Division of Drug Abuse Control for Fiscal Year 1975 planning funds, not exceeding $30,000.

A Drug Abuse Control Planner was added to the CVPDC Staff in January and a Drug Abuse Control Advisory Committee has been established to assist in the preparation of a Comprehensive Regional Drug Abuse Control Plan.

A final report on the Fuel Oil Allocation Program was presented to the Commissioners and it indicated that 104 hardship cases were handled by the Commission.

The program was established to assist prople who could not get home fuel oil because they were new in the area or for any other reason than bad credit.

Commissioner Selbert (Corky) Myers, representing Campbell County commented about the program saying, "I think this program has shown how the planning district commission works for the localities and is here to serve the people."
